INTRODUCTION TO OLD TESTAMENT EXEGESIS

Spring semester 2013

Instructor: Johanna W.H. Bos
Class Assistants: Erin Gill

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Exegesis is a discipline within the field of biblical studies based on skills learned in introductory Hebrew and introduction to the study of Scripture. The exegetical process begins with the seemingly simple task of translating and consideration of the meaning and implications of important words in the unit. We look at the structure of the unit, the types of sentences and other features, as key vocabulary, word choice and so on. In Introductory exegesis, the units are established for the student; the task of establishing a unit belongs to a more advanced stage of exegetical study. After considering specific words and phrases, we review the testimony of different versions and translations through the selections made by the editors of the Hebrew Bible. A more in-depth study of a particular word, key to the passage, furthers our engagement with the text. If at all possible, we make an attempt at placing the text, reviewing the possible history and context of its composition and interpretation, and to the literary frame in which we find it. Translating, reading and placing the text will lay a solid foundation for a more informed and theologically responsible interpretation.

OBJECTIVES

At the end of the course students should be comfortable translating and reviewing a Hebrew passage applying text and historical criticism, leading to a meaningful interpretation of the text. Above all we aim for commitment to and enthusiasm for the biblical language which is able to provide us with a solid basis for understanding the text of Sacred Scripture.

METHOD

The primary tool to achieve our objectives is the workbook entitled “A HEBREW SAMPLER – An Exegetical Workbook” which will provide a guide through a sampling of Hebrew passages representative of different types of biblical literature. In addition, students will prepare six brief exegetical exercises to be completed during the course of the semester. Other secondary resources will be available to help us in our work. The aim is to address a good deal of biblical material and in the process become more comfortable with the exegetical process as well as increasing our degree of comfort with the Hebrew language.

POLICY ON INCLUSIVE LANGUAGE
In speech and in written assignments, it is the policy of the school to avoid divisive terms that reinforce stereotypes or are pejorative. We do not use language that leaves out part of the population, perpetuates stereotyping, or diminishes importance. We do not use male pronouns (such as “men”) to refer to a group that includes females as well. Consult the Academic Support Center for additional guidance if necessary. See: http://www.lpts.edu/Academic_Resources/ASC/avoidinggenderbiasinlanguage.asp.

Academic Honesty
All work turned in to the instructors is expected to be the work of the student whose name appears on the assignment. Any borrowing of the ideas or the words of others must be acknowledged by quotation marks (where appropriate) and by citation of author and source. Students unfamiliar with issues relating to academic honesty can find help from the staff in the Academic Support Center and should make use of the available resources at an early date, since violations of seminary policy on academic honesty can lead to a failing grade for the course.

INTERNET AND CELLPHONES
The use of laptop computers during class is allowed by permission only. Cell phones are to be turned off.

REQUIREMENTS AND EVALUATION
Students are expected to be prepared for class and follow assignments. REHEARSING VOCABULARY is key to facility in translating and reading and IS A STUDENT’S RESPONSIBILITY. Class participation will consist of translating and discussing assigned Hebrew texts and readings from the secondary literature. Students are expected to keep organized notes.

Due dates for short papers are spread throughout the semester with guidelines for each assignment posted.

Exegesis of the Hebrew Bible – SYLLABUS

Attendance at all class meetings is a basic requirement. Three absences reduce the class attendance grade by 100 points, with each additional absence reducing that grade by 50 points. Habitual tardiness in class attendance will affect the participation grade. In case of unavoidable conflict, notify the instructor as soon as possible. Participation in class includes pertinent and productive questions, as well as insights and observations relevant to the subject and readings.
