This course explores the variety and evolution of Christian beliefs and practices in medieval Europe from the fifth century CE (emergence of distinctive Latin and Greek Christianities) through the early sixteenth century (Reformation) within and outside formal Church structures. We will read and analyze primary sources on diverse topics including the conversion of Europe and religious acculturation of pagan peoples, the power and appeal of Christian saints, Christian kingship and notions of appropriate Christian power, monastic, scholastic, and lay piety, pilgrimage and Crusade, dissent and institutional response, the relationship to those outside the faith, religious developments in the fifteenth century and Protestant and Catholic divergence.

Required Texts:

- Kevin Madigan, Medieval Christianity (Yale University Press, 2015) 978-0-300-15872-4

Also: a set of readings available in pdf format on a blackboard site and a number of internet documents, linked to the syllabus here

Please bring reading materials to class on the day(s) they are assigned, including printouts of web documents or a device for viewing them.

Course Requirements for RN 307

Students are expected to attend and participate in every class. All reading is to be completed before the class for which it is assigned. Written work for the class will include three analytical papers and a ten-to twelve-page research paper on an approved topic within the field of medieval Christianity. The grading for the course will be as follows: 30% for class participation, 15% for each of the short papers, and 25% for the research paper. The class participation grade will be based on attendance, participation in discussion, and the level of preparedness and involvement in the course.

If you know that you will miss class because you are sick or are away from school for an emergency, please try to let me know ahead of time, if possible, via phone or e-mail. More than three unapproved absences during the semester may result in a lowered overall grade in addition to an unsatisfactory class participation grade.

Course Requirements for RN 607 & STH TX 817

In addition to mastering the material required of undergraduates, graduate students are also expected to familiarize themselves with current scholarship in the field of medieval Christianity and to develop a critical understanding of the relevant issues in scholarship. Additional reading for graduate students includes the following two articles and any three books from the graduate reading list.

John Van Engen, "The Christian Middle Ages as an Historiographical Problem," American Historical Review 91 (1986), 519-52 (access on line via JSTOR) and Van Engen, "The Future of Medieval Church History" Church History 71 (2002), 492-522 (also available on JSTOR).

Graduate students will write three- to four-page reviews of the three additional books and will be asked to make brief (5-10 minute) presentations to the class summarizing the work and placing it within the context of the general course syllabus. In lieu of the undergraduate research paper, graduate students will write a twelve- to fifteen-page bibliographic review essay examining the state of scholarship on a topic chosen in consultation with the instructor. Graduate students will also be responsible for the three analytical papers, which will be judged by a standard appropriate to graduate level work.
