

Fellowship Final Report Guidelines

A final (5-page) report on your work and activities is due by May 15 at the end of the project.

The report should have these elements:

1. Description of what you actually did during the project
2. Critical Reflection on your experience and what you learned. Revisit your project description and goals: What did you learn about teaching? About your students and how they learn? About your institutional context and its affect on your classroom?
3. Projections: What do you need to do next and who/what will be helpful to you in developing this next phase?
4. Learning Abstract: In less than 150 words, summarize what you learned from the project's activities and conversations. What might your project contribute to the conversation on teaching and learning?
